Her career goal is to work in the adoption and foster system to improve policy. She also wants to work in international adoption to ensure every child has a loving family.

"Caring and giving are necessary for communities to succeed," she said. "Communities can grow together by working together. Giving back is essential in order to reach the needs of those who need help. You never know when you will be in a place to be on the receiving hand of giving. Therefore, we must be thankful and help when we are able."
